US Vice President visit and ship visit announcement from the U.S./N.Z. Council

This has been a historic time with Vice President Biden’s announcement that the U.S. Navy will return to New Zealand. The formation of the U.S. | New Zealand Council was a product of the events that began 30 years ago because it was clear how important the United States and New Zealand were to each other in the international community. The Council has worked tirelessly through the intervening years to aid in the repair of the relationship. The U.S. – New Zealand relationship is truly stronger today than it has ever been and we are very excited as we move to a new chapter.

According to USNI News the U.S. Plans to send an Arleigh Burke-class destroyer (DDG-51) to participate in the November 2016 Royal New Zealand Navy's 75th anniversary highlighting New Zealand's contributions to global security.

Remarks by Vice President Joe Biden and New Zealand Prime Minister John Key

Prime Minister John Key says the United States has accepted an invitation to send a ship to attend the Royal New Zealand Navy’s 75th anniversary later this year.

"Vice-President Joe Biden confirmed in our discussions today that the US has accepted the invitation and intends to have a ship represent the US Navy at this event," Mr Key says.

"We are naturally pleased the US is taking up the invitation. It is a further demonstration of the strength of our close relationship, our friendship and our shared values.

"There is a long-standing process for considering ship visits under our nuclear free legislation. I will receive advice in due course to assist me in making a decision.

"There is no specific time frame for this process but it is likely to be a number of weeks before the advice is prepared and the Government is in a position to make any further announcement."

TPP Update from Inside US Trade

The Office of the U.S. Trade Representative on Aug. 12 sent to Congress the draft Statement of Administration Action for the Trans-Pacific Partnership, a procedural step necessary before a draft implementing bill is sent to Congress.

USTR’s chief agriculture negotiator Darci Vetter said here Aug. 2 that the Trans-Pacific Partnership implementing bill will largely consist of language to implement tariff cuts, and that Congress could pass it in as few as 10 days in a lame-duck session if there is sufficient support for the trade agreement.

Administration officials told business representatives they are doing all they can to ensure the Trans-Pacific Partnership is passed as soon as possible this year, citing the ongoing “educational campaign” in which cabinet officials are making the foreign policy and economic case for passing the deal, according to a U.S. government official. The White House is intent on a Lame-Duck TPP push despite Senator Clinton’s Opposition.

Singapore’s Prime Minister was recently in Washington and his message to congress was that the U.S needs to pass TPP and remain engaged in the region.

Commerce Secretary Penny Pritzker is reported as saying that the Obama administration will mount an all-out effort over the next several months to win approval of the TPP before President Barack Obama leaves office in January.

However Senate Majority Leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) on Aug. 25 said the current Trans-Pacific Partnership agreement will not be taken up by the Senate this year, noting that the deal has serious flaws that can be fixed by the next administration.

AmCham understands that the Senate Finance Committee is working on issues with USTR in the key areas in which it does not believe the TPP currently meets TPA standards. They are doing in order to get votes to get the TPP passed; in order not to set precedents that will hurt the US in future trade deals and to guarantee that enforcement will be vigorous.

The Asia Pacific America Chambers of Commerce are gearing up their lobbying. This will be done through TPP country specific op-ed pieces around the importance of TPP in country. The articles aim to show examples of the impact on U.S. interests economically if TPP is not passed as well as testimonials from US business in the region. Discussions are taking place about a possible Washington Doorknock in late November/early December.

Sixth U.S.-New Zealand Strategic Dialogue

Assistant Secretary for East Asian and Pacific Affairs Daniel Russel was in New Zealand on August 14 to participate in the sixth U.S.-New Zealand Strategic Dialogue. He met with New Zealand government officials and discuss bilateral cooperation and developments in global affairs.

Trade Policy Strategy Refresh Public Meetings

New Zealand is refreshing its Trade Policy Strategy and we would like to hear your views on how it should be shaped. Our existing Trade Policy Strategy is more than 20 years old. It has delivered significant benefits for New Zealand and New Zealanders, but the way business is done today and the global environment that we operate in have changed. This means that we need to adapt to continue getting the best deal from international trade.

Trade Minister Todd McClay will be hosting a series of public meetings in September. This is an opportunity to hear from the Minister and officials on the thinking behind intended shifts in New Zealand’s approach to international trade and the support it is intended to give New Zealand exporters, and for us to hear your views.

The first two meetings are as follows; we are working on arrangements for an additional meeting in the South Island.
- Date: Monday, 5 September 2016, Time: 9.00am-12.00pm, Location: Intercontinental Hotel, 2 Grey Street, Wellington
- Date: Tuesday, 6 September 2016, Time: 2.30pm-5.30pm, Location: Crowne Plaza, 128 Albert St, Auckland
- Date: TBA, Time: TBA, Location: South Island, TBA

Tripartite summit delivers for Auckland

From ATEED

The numbers tell the Tripartite Economic Summit Auckland 2016’s success story: the number of delegates (nearly 700) exceeded the expected attendance of 300, and the international delegations (90 from China and 60 from the US) exceeded our targets of 50 from each.

The 300 formal business matched meetings held at the BNZ Business Activation Lounge was also a great result in terms of one of the key summit aims and its theme – making connections. There were many more informal connections made between businesses.

The direct foreign investment generated by the summit at this point stands at $30 million, with more forecast to come.

ATEED has a programme in place to help Auckland companies convert the business opportunities created by the summit into actual deals and partnerships, and maintain momentum towards the third summit in Guangzhou 2017.

TOURISM

Tourism NZ update

From mid-July our team will be taking the best of New Zealand on an epic road-trip through the US with 38 New Zealand operators, visiting 15 cities between July and November.

Last year we took New Zealand to Texas, the Lone Star State, undertaking the biggest sales mission to the US in over a decade in support of Air New Zealand’s new Houston route.

This year we are once again supporting new air-routes, with the launch of the American Airlines and United Airlines connections. Alongside Air New Zealand’s existing services, the additional capacity and extensive cross-America networks the airlines offer are critical to unlocking the potential we see to grow this important visitor market. America Wild – National Parks adventure

From TRAVELinc Memo – www.travelinc.co.nz

Brand USA in conjunction with the US Ambassador, Mark Gilbert, celebrated the 100th anniversary of the US National Park Service with a VIP screening of the documentary America Wild: National Parks Adventure at Auckland’s IMAX theatre.

America Wild, filmed in more than 30 national parks across the USA with IMAX 3D cameras, follows three adventurers as they hike, climb and explore their way across a few of the USA’s national parks.

In town for the launch, Anne Madison chief strategy and communication officer for Brand USA, says it was appropriate to screen the movie here as New Zealanders have a shared interest in preserving their parks.

Visit by President & CEO of Brand USA

By Wayne Mitcham, Brand USA

Christopher L. Thompson is president and CEO of Brand USA, the nation’s public-private partnership dedicated to increasing international visitation to the United States through marketing and promotional efforts. In this role, Chris is responsible for accelerating the organization’s efforts to build and execute effective marketing strategies to increase U.S. travel exports, create jobs, strengthen the economy, and help enhance the image of the United States with people all over the world.

On a recent visit to New Zealand for the first time, Chris was more than impressed with the visitation growth from New Zealand to the U.S. Back in 2005 we had just on 140,000 Kiwis visiting the U.S., in 2015 we reach just on 300,000 visitations, says Thompson. With the investment in U.S. legacy carriers in the New Zealand market this adds an extra 165,000 seats a year to the U.S. which is extremely encouraging and great news for the New Zealand Travel Trade and kiwi travellers. www.thebrandusa.com

Airlines

American Airlines will launch a new daily non-stop service from Los Angeles to Hong Kong on board their Boeing 777-300ER aircraft from September 7th. The aircraft offers a three class service, Flagship SM class suite (American’s first class branding), Business and Economy cabins. Both front cabins offer fully lie-flat seats, direct aisle access and increased work space, along with international Wi-Fi, power outlets, USB ports and in-flight entertainment.

Air New Zealand is offering new short life Premium Economy fares to Los Angeles and selected USA destinations for sales effective immediately to 05 September, starting at $4142 plus taxes return to Los Angeles. Capacity at these levels is limited so contact your BWT consultant for further details.

Several of our BWT consultants viewed the United Dreamliner this week and were very impressed. Silver, Elite and Gold Elite Air New Zealand travellers can use the premier check in at the airport when flying United. A tip for travellers – do not pack your “power packs” in your checked luggage as they scan all bags at check in and then ask the traveller to remove the power pack before departure. The Airline recommends carrying these in your hand luggage instead, to avoid “last minute re-packing” at check in!

Hotels & Holidays

Our Private Client advisor Tanya Warman has returned from Virtuoso Travel week in Las Vegas where 2500 luxury travel suppliers from around the world were on hand. Tanya made even more outstanding personal contacts for us to stay in touch with to ensure that our BWT clients receive better recognition and amenities than other travellers. Our key operator based in New York has access to seats to Theatre, Shows and Major Sporting events. However, they excel at going beyond the normal service to provide an experience to remember. For example they can arrange visits behind the scenes at Broadway shows, dinner in a private kitchen of a celebrity chef or something tailored to a specific client requirement such as Father and Son batting practice with the NYC Yankees before a baseball game! So whether you are travelling privately or planning a special incentive for your sales staff, let us know and we would be delighted to help.

The annual Wharekauhau Country Estate Louis Roederer Champagne event is back!

Buckley Systems expanding for the future

Ion implantation technology leader Buckley Systems has expanded locally, building on earlier expansion in North America as demand for its precision electromagnets continues to grow.

Based in the Auckland suburb of Mt Wellington, the company has almost doubled its factory space to improve workflow and meet increased demand.

To aid its on-going work, Buckley Systems has also acquired a 50 per cent stake in the Canadian based ion technology company D-Pace. Buckley Systems and D-Pace have worked together for 20 years in the design, development and manufacture of beamline systems, beam diagnostics, and ion sources. The formalisation of the cooperation has resulted in the development of an ion source test facility, which both companies use and lease out for certification and verification of products.

“With D-Pace doing the design and ourselves the manufacturing, we have reduced the time to complete projects," said Mark Stolten, Buckley Systems' Chief Operating Officer.

PhD students from Universities in New Zealand and Canada carry out much of the development work, which is cutting-edge discovery science, in conjunction with Buckley Systems and D-Pace.

On a more practical front, Buckley Systems' expansion into a neighbouring building in Mt Wellington has allowed the heavy fabrication and large coil-forming operations of electromagnet manufacturing to be carried out more easily with time savings.

“The demand for larger-screen implantation machinery has seen some of the magnets exceeding 25 tons and stretching the resources of the existing building,” said Mr. Stolten.

The space freed up in the existing plant allows greater throughput of smaller magnets, giving the business the agility to react to market demands, he said.

Buckley Systems has a 30 year history of manufacturing ion implantation and particle acceleration systems in New Zealand, and resisted approaches to move over $85 million of production in 2015 offshore.

All the production is exported and is used in semiconductor manufacturing, oncology treatment facilities, medical and scientific diagnostic devices and physics research facilities.

AmCham partners with The SingularityU NZ Summit 14-16 Nov in Christchurch

The SingularityU NZ Summit brings the world’s top speakers and experts on exponentially accelerating technologies together with New Zealand’s and Australia’s leaders of today and tomorrow, giving us the knowledge and insight we need to compete — and win — in an exponentially changing world.

Within the next 20 years, 47-81% of jobs as we currently understand them will be under threat from technology. This includes jobs that have always been considered ‘safe’ from automation. But until we achieve a collective understanding of what exponential technological growth truly looks like — and how it affects us all — we will be at a disadvantage.

But the ever-increasing pace of change doesn't just hold threat — it also holds opportunity. We are shifting from an economic model based on scarcity to one based on abundance. What are the strategic implications? What kinds of policies do we need? What is the impact on our economy? What are the ethical considerations? None of the old rules apply.

The SingularityU New Zealand Summit is a conference like no other. You’ll learn about artificial intelligence – but it’s not a computing conference. You’ll learn about self-driving cars and networks – but it’s not a tech conference. You’ll learn about medicine and biotechnology – but it’s not a health conference. You’ll learn about the future of crime and the future of work – but it’s not a public policy conference. We expect you to come away from the Summit with nothing less than a total paradigm shift about where we’ve come from, where we’re going, and what’s possible.

Your ticket to three extraordinary days. The SingularityU New Zealand Summit will be like no conference you’ve ever attended. Over three days in November, you’ll hear from world experts in exponential technologies, from Silicon Valley and beyond, and learn what the implications are for you. You’ll also discover the cutting edge of technological progress taking place right here in New Zealand.

As an event partner AmCham has secured 10 tickets at 50% off our Super Early Bird pricing, (which was $2,495 + GST.) Access Code (AMCHAMSUNZ) for you to use to purchase ‘Special Friend’ tickets.

LEGAL ISSUES

Norris Echetebu Law – American Law Specialists

In partnership with the AmCham NZ, our objective is to provide AmCham NZ members with information on the complex US legal landscape, to promote US-NZ business relationships, and to assist NZ businesses expanding into the lucrative US markets. In our monthly column, we write about legal issues which we deal with in our representation of NZ businesses doing business in and with the US. However, we are also open to suggestions on topics about which members are interested in learning. So, please feel free to email us with your comments, questions and any suggested topics at info@nz-uslegal.co.nz.

CHOICE OF LAW PROVISIONS

Every contract is governed by the law of a jurisdiction. The law which governs the contract is used to decide issues such as the contract’s formation, validity, interpretation, performance, and breach. If the parties do not agree to the governing law, then the court will decide what jurisdiction’s law will govern the contract based on the Conflicts of Law principles of the presiding court’s jurisdiction. Generally, the common law position finds that the governing law will be that of the jurisdiction in which both the parties are located, where the contract is performed, or where the breach occurred. The fact that a court may simply choose the applicable law brings about an untenable uncertainty that unnecessarily reduces the value of the contract in the first place. After all, a contract is written so that the parties may have certainty as to the transaction.

Contractual parties may avoid this uncertainty by agreeing to the governing law in their contracts. Many New Zealand companies by default want New Zealand law to apply to the contract, thinking that this would potentially offer them an advantage against a US company. However, choosing New Zealand law is not always the best choice. One should consider several issues before making a determination as to which jurisdiction’s law should govern the interpretation of the contract.

Does New Zealand Law Provide an Adequate Remedy in Case of Breach?

Where the US business breaches the contract, the New Zealand company will want to recover damages which adequately compensates it for its injuries. When it comes to remedies, not all law is created equal. For example, if a New Zealand company is a product supplier to US purchasers, then a question of whether the US Uniform Commercial Code’s measurement of damages or the law of damages in the particular US state in which the goods were delivered would exceed those allowed under New Zealand law. Another example would be in the measurement of lost profits as part of damages. Some US states can be dramatically more generous when it comes to determining what is included in that calculation what is not. On the other hand, some US state law does not allow lost profits as damages in certain scenarios, where New Zealand law may.

Length of the Statute of Limitations

Depending the type of agreement a NZ company is entering into, it may be advantageous to have a longer or shorter statute of limitations. The statute of limitations is the deadline set by law before which a party must bring a legal action for breach of contract. In New Zealand, the general statute of limitations for a breach of contract claim is six (6) years. In the US, the statute of limitations for a breach of contract is anywhere between four (4) years and fifteen (15) years depending on applicable state law.

Where is the Lawsuit Most Likely to Occur?

If the US company breaches, a New Zealand business may be forced to sue the US Company in the US, either because of choice of jurisdiction or forum non conveniens challenges. Further, if the US company breaches and is sued in New Zealand, the NZ company may then be forced to go to court in the US to enforce the judgment in any case, which will add significant costs and delays to the entire process. From a practical standpoint, if one must sue in the United States, it can add significant cost to the lawsuit if New Zealand law governs the contract. First, this would require fully briefing the court on New Zealand law, which in a worst case scenario may require hiring a New Zealand legal expert to come to the court in the US to present evidence on what the law is. Second, the court in the US will be unfamiliar with New Zealand law and may not produce the expected result that a New Zealand court would produce. Third, the additional briefing due to the court can add a significant delay to obtaining a decision from the court on the matter.

Careful consideration of the above-stated issues should be undertaken when deciding the choice of governing law in a contract. As we have stated time and time again, doing business in the United States exposes New Zealand businesses to a higher risk of litigation. It is important to write a contract’s provisions with an eye towards this increased litigation risk exposure. If push comes to shove, you will be glad you did.
